Pond Plain Improvement Society.

Report of the secretary of the Pon Plain Improvement Society at their first annual meeting held Tuesday evening, July 22nd

Early in 1908, a number of residents leemed it an imperative necessity that the street needed immediate repairs and with this end in view, circulated a petition to place an article in the town warrant and at the same time went before the appropriation committee with the result that an appropriation of $1,000 was made by the

When before the appropriation commit tee, the question was asked what sum of money would be necessary to put the street in proper condition and it was es timated that at least $5,000 would be nec essary and the committee recommended the $1,000 appropriation with the understanding that the roadway and sidewalks should be put in thorough condition as far as the appropriation would do the

By some oversight, either intentionally or through a misunderstanding, the sidewalk extending from Hollis street to the Boston Ice Co's roadway, was overlooked out, instead, the sidewalk on the westerly side of the street was gone over nearly its entire length with a coating of coal ashes which is a dread to the women folks on account of soiling the clothes Out of this black ashes, has cropped in numerable pieces of brick, bottles, old iron and what not, making it at times

This material as you are all aware was the refuse of the pumping station together with scrapings out of the gutters. There are places in this side walk which need immediate attention. The roadway itself as far as it was repaired we consider a good thorough piece of work although extremely expensive to the town due to the fact that the material for the roadway was carted some two or

During the early part of 1908, this locality was afflicted with a number of fires and if continued would soon have devastated our beautiful neighborhood. A number of citizens had the foresight to see that something should immediately be done and commenced to lay plans for a field day in order to raise funds toward the securing of proper fire apparatus and on July 31st called a meeting of residents consider the matter and it was then lecided to organize as an Improvement Society, with the result that Wm. L. Swan was chosen President, Chas. E. Joll Vice Present, J. B. Denbroeder Secretary. Gilbert M. Shaw Treasurer; the society to be known as the Pond Plain Improve-

The first work of the society was to appoint a committee of five to investigate the conditions of the vicinity as to fire protection, confer with the Selectmen and report at the next meeting.

It was considered escential that we have an entertainment committee to enrich the treasury and the first efforts of this committee was given the Saturday after Labor day which was set apart for games and sports, netting the society

The first report of the committee or Improvement called the attention of the society to a sign placed on town land or Main street street reading, "Pigs for Sale" one of the committee reporting that he had called the matter to the attention of the Superintendent of Streets who advised the said member to see the owner of the sign and request him to remove it but be fore any further action was taken it was ington school at a salary of $525 and reported that the sign had been removed. elected teacher of the first grade at the mittee was having a rather stormy ses-Washington school in place of Miss sion with the Fire Engineers of the town and came to the conclus ion that the Engineers were not in a position to as sist us in any way and therefore con sidered the society thrown upon its own resources, suggesting that we examine it to the merits of the Badger Fire Extinguisher, which the committee considered the hands of our strenuous Entertainment Committee has been transformed into pleasant meeting place. This year the society went before th town officials with a request for a furthe appropriation to continue the repairing of an electric light. Both the latter have been installed and we understand that work will soon be continued on the street. The triangle at the foot of Thicket street has been laid out with shrubbery and, by the kindness of town officials, very neat and tasty sign board has been erected, making the appearance of that locality, with our chemical house in the background quite picturesque. There have been a number of shade trees placed along the roadway which are all doing well and I trust this fall that the society will be in a position to plant at least 100 trees along our sidewalks.

The society has had its trials and storms, but today, I believe its members are all united with one end in view, that is, to make Pond Plain the place to live in not only a place beautiful but healthy, socially and morally.

Every day we see little things crop out which ought to make every member proud of the society and it has made a name and reputation which cannot be smirched. The little things I refer to are kindnesses and helps which outside parties show toward the society, such as the Paragon Quartette. They also sing assisting the society without charge, donations of shrubbery and donations of coal to heat our room during the winter, watering the street for our Fourth of the usual inconvenience of home catering July celebration, all of these little helps show that the public are interested in us

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon our energetic entertainment committee. During the year they have handled wedding trip which will take in the sum- something like $1000 with the results that we have had a continuous feast of good things, whist parties, dances, bean supreside at 75 Vine street, Weymouth and pers, ball games, Fourth of July celebrations, field days and have everywhere and temperament.

For the short time the society has been in existance many things have been ac complished which could never have been done without a society of this kind: for instance, the society has brought the people of this vicinity closer together, we have a better regard for neighbors and when passing on the street you can always depend upon a friendly greeting newomers are welcomed and immediately through our society and its gathering are

Our socials, our entertainments, our field days have all had a tendency to draw us closer together and to know each other

About the first of the year there were everal places in this locality for sale. Today all of these places have been taken Nina, bm (B. C. Wilder) by new people and the prices paid in some cases have been well above the assed value, in fact one of our members has been obliged to seek a home outside of our district owing to the fact that the house which he rented has been sold and he is obliged to move away as there is not another vacant house in the vicinity. There is land slong Pond street which should be opened up, in fact it is really too valueable to remain idle or to be assessed as wood land. I trust the members of the society will lo all in their power to encourage land owners in the vicinity to open up their ands and encourage the building of good residences as we are sorely in need of Paragon Park.

The regular Saturday night fireworks feature at Paragon Park has proven such a big hit that Manager Dodge has gone more elaborately into his pyrotechnic program and by arrangement with the American Fireworks Company he has a display which is made exclusively for this resort. In fact, the manufacturers have installed a branch plant at Nantasket especially for making an exhibition at Nash, ss Paragon on Saturday nights which may Redgate, If not be seen anywhere else. It amounts the street, also for a fire alarm box and to a regular 4th of July event every Saturday night, and not only do the boats go down from Boston on Saturday evening Orcutt, 3b loaded to their capacity, but the automobilists turn out in extraordinary numbers, O'Dowd, 2b and the summer residents all along the Ryan, rf South Shore make Paragon Park their sight-seeing place that night.

The trustee of a country school was on his rounds, and at one of his examinations of the pupils, the question was raised as to the value of a comma. This, the trustee treated with something like scorn, claiming that the comma didn't amount to a row of pins. The teacher, who had at various times impressed its value on his pupils, thereupon called on one of the bright boys of the school to give an exbest kind and fit the animal's neck perample of what he thought was the comma's feetly. It should be kept clean at all value by writing a sentence on the blackboard. The boy smiled at the teacher and washed and brushed each day. Much promptly wrote on the board. A Wild Ride and What Happened to the Culprit.

By AMELIE DELANCEY. Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary

Press.] For six months the Widow Penrose had been planning an addition to her country residence, but absence and a rush of orders had prevented her nephew, Gordon Gordon, from running down and taking the work in hand. Finally he appeared in his auto driven by himself, and the machine was left at the gate. It had rested there less than half an hour when along came three young ladies with fish poles on their shoulders and one poor little fish to show that they had not visited the lake in vain that fore-

The sight of an auto was more familiar to them than that of a carriage. They were residents of the city and friends at home and were summering at good Aunt Mary's boarding house, a quarter of a mile away. "An auto!" they cried in chorus as they came to a halt. "And the owner is in the house!" "And we can take a ride without his

knowing it

"Yes, but none of us can run it." "Girls," said Miss Dorothy Flint with whom this story has mostly to do, "I have ridden in autos so many times that I believe I could run one. Yes, I know I could. It's just like steering a boat after you get started. I believe you turn the crank in front first. That ignites the spark or something. Then, after you get in, you pull this lever back, and away she goes. I think the auto belongs to a doctor. Doctors are always good hearted men, and I'm sure this one won't begrudge us a little spin. Get in."

But the command was in vain. They hadn't confidence in her experience and skill as a chauffeur. If she could run an auto, why not drive the machine to the lake and back? She hesitated and was jeered at. She made as if to turn away and was "dared." Perhaps Miss Dorothy's grandfather was one of those who fell at Lexington or lay wounded on the field of Bunker Hill. At any rate, the "dare" had hardly been dared when she was at the crank, and as soon as the whizzing noise came to prove that the dead machine had come to life she climbed in and gave it a start. She went off with a whew and had not covered a hundred feet when she wished she had not gone at all. But it was too late. There were a dozen "Oh, mys!" behind her, and she forgot everything but holding the wheel with a grip of death. If she had ever heard that an auto could be stopped she forgot it now. It was a hard, wide road, and she was out of sight in three minutes.

The other two girls stood there with mouths and eyes wide open and feeling helpless even to scream out when a young man came down from the C. Rivinius; Ward 2, Martin E. Hawes, George house, raised his hat, looked around and inquired somewhat anxiously: "Have you seen a stray auto round

> "It's run away," answered one after moment. "With a g-gurl," added the other as the tears came to her eyes.

"What! Do you mean that some girl is driving my auto up or down the highway without my permission?" "Y-yes!"

"And who is she, may I inquire?" "A Miss Flint." "Well, Miss Flint has nerve. Is she used to driving autos?" "We-we guess so, but she seemed scared when she started off. Won't you run after her, sir? You see, we dared her to." "And she wouldn't take a dare? Well, there's a $4,000 auto gone to wreck and a girl lying somewhere beside the road with a broken neck.

teen miles away by this time! How could she be so foolish!" "But if she is d-dead, sir, some one must bring home her-her mangled remains!" said one of the girls as both broke down and wept.

"Well, I believe there's a saddle horse in the stable, and I'll set out in pursuit. Young ladies, let this be a solemn warning to you-very solemn." He was a young man of two or three and twenty and did not look a bit like a doctor. Besides, he was not a stranger to the house from which he had emerged. He tried to look very dignified and serious as he uttered his warning, but it was a failure. Any young man of that age would have made a failure of it. Even though the girls were tearful and anxious as they walked along home they agreed titteringly that he didn't look a bit solemn. He brought out the horse as soon as possible and galloped away, but at the lake the highway forked. There were three diverging roads, and he must and did take his chance of hitting the right one. He had galloped down the left hand one for three miles before a farmer replied to his hail: "No; haven't seen no gal scootin by here in an auto at fifty miles an hour. If I had I should have flung a rock after her. Beats all how different the gals of this age are from those of forty years ago. Why, when my wife was a gal"-But the pursuer waited to hear no more. He returned to the lake and, finding the right hand road a little better than the middle one, took it and galloped; ahead. When he had gone a distance of two miles he drew rein to speak to a farmer's wife weeding a flower bed in the front yard. "A gal and an auto, eh?" she queried. "No; I don't think I've seen 'em.

t the gal's hair?" "But you have either seen them or not!" exclaimed the young man petu-

"That's so-that's so. Waal, I guess they took the other road. That is, they did if they didn't take to the fields. Think it's goin' to rain this

By the time young Gordon had returned to the lake his horse was in a lather, and be decided to go back to his aunt's in the hope that the auto might also have returned. His hope was vain. The horse was leg weary, and the rider entered the house and called up a Tarmer on the middle road "A gal and an auto?" repeated the man at the other end of the line. "You bet your boots I've seen 'em! Went by here three hours ago like a whirlwind. Struck one of my hogs lyin' in the road and knocked him a hundred feet. Whew, but that old machine was glid-

in' some!" "And the girl herself-did she seem frightened?"

"Scared most to death, I guess. Her eyes seemed to be hangin' out, and maybe she was prayin'. She was holdin' the machine in the middle of the road, however. If she lives to get to the Red bridge she'll be stopped there by the constable. He's stationed there to look for speeders."

The girl who "dared" lived to reach the bridge. It was an act of Providence. From the moment the auto got its speed, which was thirty miles an hour, she was dumb, frozen and helpless to do anything but hold the wheel. She saw nothing but the white road anot be endured, so he ordered his serv.

ahead of her. She passed vehicles and overhauled others, but she was scarceconscious of it. As she approached the bridge the strain was too much. and her fingers unclutched from the wheel, and the auto dashed its way through the roadside fence and came to a standstill in a field. Then Miss

Flint fainted away. When she came to her senses the constable was sprinkling water in her face and saying "Come, now, none of your tricks with me. You are just playing possum because I have caught you. It's a case for Squire Johnson, and I shouldn't wonder if you got jail for it."

"What-what are you going to do?" asked the girl as she staggered to her "Put you in the village lockup and arm and come along. The machine is pretty well busted, and we can't use Wonder it didn't blow up and or something of that kind?" the humble answer. "Just making the dirt fly thirty feet high and scaring folks and horses half tickled to see you. He's been aching for the last week to get hold of a speeder and give him a good dose of county jail. How dare you take the chances-how dare you!" "Would you take a dare from two girls?" asked the prisoner as she released her arm and faced him. "No-o-o, I guess not."

they want to send me to jail let 'em She was taken to the office of the village justice of the peace and arraigned. On the way there the constable's heart melted. He saw that she had had a bad scare, and he liked her defiant spirit. Therefore, while he had to make complaint against her, he did not put the speed at thirty miles an hour. To this he added the statement that if the auto hadn't struck a stone in the road it would not have struck the fence.

"Well, I wouldn't, and so there! If

Then he turned and winked at the wondering, shivering girl to put heart It may have been one of his honor's soft days. He delivered a lecture on the rise and fall of the Roman empire or some other equally interesting subject and concluded by suspending sentence. Then the constable invited the ex-prisoner home with him to dinner and set about arranging to send her back to her friends. Evening had come, and she was about ready to start when Gordon came galloping up. When he had introduced himself as the owner of the smashed auto he asked grimly:

"And who is to pay the $500 damages? And who is to pay for my trouble? Why, if the justice had known all the circumstances he'd have sent you to jail for a year!" "But the other girls dared me to do it!" protested the culprit, with trembling lip. "Say, young man," said the constable as he drew Gordon aside, "you just get even by daring the gal to marry you. She ain't the kind that takes a dare. See? You can drive her back in the buggy, and you just keep daring her all the way. Lord, but I wish I was in your shoes!" It was a fine moonlight ride. It was not too fast. The situation was a little strained at first, but after awhile the farmers heard laughter as the buggy

A FROG IN THE POT. Vexing Days of the Early Tea Tax In

New England. Tea was not brought over by the first settlers. When the pilgrims landed at Plymouth tea was selling in England at from $10 to $50 per pound. It was a luxury that had been known to Englishmen only a few years. Early settlers got along without India or China tea for a long time. They used roots, herbs and leaves found in the fields and woods as a substitute for tea. Sassafras tea was a common

Tea was advertised for sale in Bos ton in 1762 for the first time, according to historians. In 1766 patriots began to take the pledge not to drink tea because of the tax that the English gov ernment placed on it. It became fash ionable for patriotic ladies not to serve India tea, but as substitutes therefor "Labrador tea" and "Liberty tea." Captain Page of Danvers forbade his spouse to taste tea beneath his roof as long as the tax remained upon it, but the strong minded and ingenious lady ascended to the flat roof of the house, invited her friends to follow, and there she served tea to them. Some other ladies of the town fared less fortunately. They used to borrow for their tea parties the big teapot of the once famous Bell tavern. One day, after drinking the forbidden slipped my mind. What was the color beverage, the master of the house unexpectedly walked in, jumped to the fire, grabbed the teapot and turned i over, and out rolled a big frog. The jovial patriots at the Bell tavern suspecting the use of the pot had placed the frog in it. Some of the dames never drank tea afterward, for it made them sick.

Isaac Wilson of Peabody persisted in selling tea, so the Sons of Liberty seized him and compelled him to walk about town penitently repeating:

I, Isaac Wilson, a Tory be; I Isaac Wilson, I sell tea. The celebrated Boston tea party was followed by tea parties in other New England towns. In Salem, soon after the Boston party, David Mason was suspected of having had his negro servant smuggle two chests of tea into his home. Patrlots entered and searched his house. They found the tea. They gave it to boys, who paraded with it to Salem common and there burned it.

Even after the Revolution trade in tea was not wholly unrestricted. It appears that in some New England places dealers in tea were required to take out a license.-Boston Globe.

ant to get the horse properly broken in, says a writer in Chambers' Journal. Accordingly away went the groom to a celebrated horse breaker in the city of Durham and, without mentioning the animal's particular frailty, left him with a general commission to break him in. The next day the teacher of horses rode out on an experimental trip with the duke's favorite and presently found himself gently rolled upon the soil and the horse by his side, very much at his ease.

"Oh," said the horse breaker, not at all embarrassed, "is that your custom?" So he provided himself the next day with several strong stakes and plenty of sound rope and took the unceremonious steed to a large field adjoining Durham cathedral. Riding round and round, the animal, according to his character, soon stretched himself comfortably, rider and all, on the green sods. Without saying a word the horse breaker, getting up. seized upon his wooden stakes, drove them deep and firm into the ground all around the willful brute and then by means of the rope fastened him down exactly in the position chosen by himself, so that neither legs nor body could stir one inch. The Canny Scot's Sense of Humor. The reason a Scot does not laugh at ı joke right away, says Dean Ramsay is not, as is the popular fiction, that he is "slow in the uptake," but that the canny man will not commit himself. The Scot minister, who is Scotland's common public speaker, is aware, consciously President. . or instinctively, of this trait, and his delivery of an anecdote with a point is a thing of unique art.

Two hours later the guests retire to their chambers for the night. They are locked in, it is true, but the obliging guard will open on any reasonable request. There is no rule against talking, and guests may read or write by the light of their own candles until they feel disposed to go to bed. A gentle routine it is. No one is overcrowded, for, while there are accommodations for a hundred persons, the number of guests is seldom anything like that. The disagreeable monotony of seeing the same faces and hearing the same anecdotes, complained of by arctic travelers, is obviated by the coming and going of inmates. The comfort of guests is pretty well assured by a staff of nine guards and three or four cooks and Letters to guests are not epened before delivery, as in common penal institutions. Three days a week are set uside for visitors, but no member of the Alimony club is compelled to see his wife. Once in a long while, how ever, a member of the fair sex enters the portals as a guest. There was one woman brought to the office in contempt proceedings subsequent on a cupplementary inquiry, but the referee nels a hearing on the spot, and the woman was discharged with consent of counsel. One Virtue of Art.

The greater number of us are condemned by circumstance of income and the routine of duty to a life restrained by walls, streets and the more or less flexible bounds of the community. The greater world without is defined by such impressions as the books and the newspapers and the chance travelers make upon our imaginations. When the opportunity of vacation or enforced travel takes us into country and cities thus described, we learn how awry and colorless these initial impressions sense-that the mind can never recreate all of any scene brought to us by others. The painter, as skillfully as the musician, can catch movement, light and poetry and can present them, so far as they may be reproduced, to the senses of the beholder. His expertness at this is often weird, uneanny. At least a half dozen pictures can make one feel as if present in the scene, a thing impossible to the photograph or to any other of the graphic arts. This, we believe, is a valuable quality of art. It can bring a relief from the dulling rule of duty. It can impart a touch of the buoyancy of travel. It can, to employ a hackneyed but fitting phrase, take one out of one-

A Healthy Person Needs a Good Breakfast.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, iconoclast-in ordinary to the medical profession, as usual upsets our previous ideas of bodily health in an article in Woman's Home Companion for August. Doctor Hutchinself-respect, and assuring us that, left alone, we are not such idiots, after all In this particular article, for instance, he points out that the idea of eating little in the summer-time is a fallacy. Of break fast, for instance, he says "It is customary to make the first meal of the day slightly the lightest and distinctly the plainest and simplest of the three. If there be any deficiency of the appetite, breakfast is the meal at which this is most likely to show itself. But this lack of appetite is in nine cases out of ten clearly traceable to sleeping in an unventilated room or to late hours in foul air the night before, or to insufficient exercise the preceding day, and is no indication that the body really requires less thers. Just now unusual interest centres food at this time. Perfectly healthy men who sleep with their windows open and go to bed at a reasonable hour will tell you that they enjoy their breakfast as well as any other meal of the day, and many even call it their best meal.

the lightness and unimportance of the breakfast is that wide-spread subterfuge, the 'continental breakfast', consisting of amounts to 830 per acre, payable in ter a cup of coffee and some fruit or a single annual instalments, without interest roll. PEOPLE'S COLUMN

Mr. Editor :-Probably very few of our townpeople have given a thought to the coming Weymouth fair, but to one in the writer's position for some weeks it has been a very lively subject The Weymouth Agricultural Society with its record of nearly fifty years of education and pleasure-giving is an honored institution. Both in the past and at the present time it has had the support of many of our best citizens. Like many similiar societies it has had its seasons of prosperity and of adversity, but unlike some others it has not pulled down its The precipitation for Massachusetts flag and given up. The Weymouth Agricultural Society still lives and will continue to do so just so long as the people of Weymouth care to have it.

To the writer it appears that Weymouth The new religion of Pres. But worse than this is the fact that few Weymouth people go to the fair and help support an institution which a handful of men have labored hard to make successful. We venture to say that not over 1500 of our "own folks" paid admission at the gates last year. Why? No one really wants this to happen

Therefore is it not the best policy for Weymouth people to support the Fair as it ought to be, and stand behind it not only financially, but with the good word spoken at the right time. Failing to do this can have but one result, the Wey mouth Fair which has existed so many years, will at length have to be given up. Therefore the Weymouth Fair is here to stay, for the people of Weymouth will not allow it to die. To assure this let us all rally to the support of the Fair. Send two thousand people the first day, and three thousand the last two, and we can rest assured that the Fair will continue and grow better with each succeeding year. There are two plans suggested to insure success and provide the management with the funds and the courage to arrange the best fair possible. The first is the formation of a Board of Patrons consisting of perhaps a 100 men who would be drawn on only in case of need occasioned by bad weather or unavoidable

The second is the advance sale of season tickets, in such number as to warrant the expenditure of money enough to produce a winning program.

Possibly a combination of these two methods might be feasible, and a thousand or more Supporting Patrons might be obtained who would pay two dollars a year for the Fair, and to each patron would be ssued a season ticket

Whatever may be the plans for the fu ture that will insure the Fair's contlnuance, arrangements are nearing completion for this year's program and we assure the public that our Exhibition this themselves as they are certainly doing better for us year by year

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Asso-Miss Mortimer, an orphan living with an aunt, was rich, beautiful and otherwise attractive. At twenty-five she began to think it time to cease declining all the offers of marriage that continued to pour in on her and take a partner. Mentally passing in review the men from whom she knew she might pick, she settled on three-Arthur Emerson, a young clergyman field Dempster of the army and Cameron Wood, a nobody. The next day the hostess caught the clergyman making gestures before the mirror. Casting a quick glance about him and being satisfied he was unseen, he dropped on his knees, placing the palms of his hands together, practicing the attitude of prayer. Yet it was evident that the object of his worship was herself. Next came the soldier, who, upon entering, stood before the mirror, permitting his features to relax with an expression that was very repulsive to Miss Mortimer. THE WORD "BANZAL"

Has Been Used In Japan From the

Earliest Ages. It is not infrequent to find men speculating as to the origin of the now familiar "banzai," and we believe that a general impression classes this excelent ejaculation among the inventions of modern Japan. Quite recently infleed we heard a learned Japanese declare that the late Professor Toyama was the originator of the word as the Japanese equivalent of "hurrah." But the truth is that "banzai" belongs to a very much remoter date. History thows that it was used certainly as long ago as the year 486 A. D., and probably it was not an innovation even then. In the "Chronicles of Japan," a work published in the year 820 A. D., it is related that in the spring of 486 A. D. the Emperor Woke, remembered by posterity as "Kenzo, Tenno," repaired to the park of the summer hall and there held revel by "the winding streams." His guests were a concourse of ministers and of high officials known at that epoch under the titles of Omi, Muraji "What's the use," he drawled. "if and Miyakko. When the feast was at Its height the guests, we read, "raised repeated cries of banzai." It may fairly be assumed that this formula of gratulation did not originate then, but at any rate its undoubted use in

At this Edmonds smiled at his wife.

"Neither did we. Now we are glad we did," he said. "But, Tom, why haven't you called? You might have found us before this in the directory." "Oh, yes," Tom rejoined, "but you're such dreadful swells I didn't dare. You see," he explained while Mrs. Edmonds tried to tell him how modest they really were, "I'm just beginning. Patti's Parrot.

Mme. Adelina Patti, staying some years ago in the fall in New York, heard of a wonderful talking parrot, one Jumbo. Forthwith she bought him at the unconscionable price of £200. Once in her possession Jumbo lid not open his beak. Every bland-Ishment failed, and at length she gave him up as hopeless. Then one morning the diva awoke with a severe sore throat. She was engaged to sing at the opera on the same night and naturally in great trepidation sent off for a throat specialist. Jumbo, whom she had quite forgotten, remained to all appearance asleep on his perch. As the door opened, however, and the specialist stood on the threshold, before ever Patti could open her lips Jumbo flapped his wings in great excitement. "Oh, doctor," he croaked, "I'm so sick." That was the first and last time since Mme. Patti became possessed of him that he deigned to speak.

the prince and his warlike deeds. The "kolo" is always danced at any great national festival, and the effect of the sonorous voices and swaying ring is very fine. Then there is another dance performed by four or five, usually rouths, to the accompaniment of a fiddle, the leader setting a lot of intricate quick steps which the rest imitate at once. It is really a sort of jig and makes the spectator's head swim if he watches it for long. I never saw any dances in northern

Albania, though certain Slav artists love to depict wonderful sword dances, with beauteous maidens swaying grace fully after the style of nautch girls. A casual observer who has seen the Albanians come into Montenegrin markets or to their great weekly gathering in the bazaar of Scutari could never picture these stern, lean men dancing or at play. They never smile, and they look the life they lead, each clan ever ready for war with its neighbor and absolutely pitiless in the vendetta. The red Indian is not more stoical in his bearing than the northern Albanian clansman.-Wide World

HIS FIRST RECOGNITION.

The Turning Point In the Career of Nathaniel Hawthorne. The first reading of "The Scarlet Letter" has been told in T. W. Higginson's book of essays, "Contemporaries." The reading was given to the author's dearest critic, his wife. During the entire winter when he was a work upon the book he seemed op pressed by some secret anxiety. "There was a knot in his forehead all the time," said Mrs. Hawthorne. Finally one evening he went to her and said that he had written something which he would like to read nloud. The work amounted to very little, but still he would like to read it. All that evening he read, but as the romance was unfinished at bedtime his wife made no comments, knowing that he disliked criticism until one had heard the whole. The next night he read again, and now her suspense grew so unendurable that in the midst of a moving Weymouth, East Braintree and Boston scene she sank from her low stool to the floor, pressed her hands to her ears and declared that she could not Telephone 1378 Main. bear to hear it. SPOILING A ROMANCE

By M. QUAD. [Copyright, 1909, by T. C. McClure.] Miss Hattie Cowper, daughter of farmer, had arrived at the age of thirty-five, and no one, not even her mother, had suspected her of romance. She had cooked and washed and baked and put up pickles and made her own dresses and seemed content. Even when Zed Green, hired man to her father, had fallen in love with her and asked her to be his'n she had success. fully concealed any evidence that it was other than the humdrum program of existence and had replied that she guessed she would have him, and that settled the matter for awhile. Zed didn't want to marry for a year or two, and Hattie was content. At least no one suspected her of discontent, and yet romance was fairly bubbling in her soul. She wanted to be abducted; she wanted to elope; she wanted to be lost in the sugar bush and found by a cavalier. She kept hoping and expecting and sewing carpet rags and helping her mother make pickled lily, and time ran on, and one evening Zed announced that he was ready to marry. Then an idea came to her like a flash of light ning, and after turning it over in her mind for five minutes she answered: "Zed. I will never, never marry you unless we have some romance about

"Do you mean going to the circus of something of that kind?" he asked. "No, I don't. I mean that I don't propose to stand up in the parlor and Y. P. S. C. E. at 5.45 P. M. on Sunbe married by a justice of the peace." "Well, what do you want?"

> "I want to run away to get mar-"Shoo! I don't see the need of that when everybody's willing." "But I do. I want folks to have something to talk about, and I want something to think of afterward." "I'm willing to do all I can, Hattie. Seems kinder foolish to me, but if you look at it 'tother way it's all right. It's to be what they call an elopement

"All right. I never eloped, but I guess we can manage it somehow This is Thursday. Shall we bring it off next Tuesday night?" The date suited the young woman and next morning both got up to act rather queerly. They were absentminded and preoccupied and had s little to say to each other that before the day was over Mrs. Cowper said to her husband: "Henry, I'm afraid Hattie is comin Sunday school, 11.45 a. m. down with some sickness or other, or Y. P. S. C. E. 6.15 p. m. Evening service else she's got some awful thing on her mind. I have never seen her so quie to all of these services. Preching at Once she put her arms around me and asked me to forgive her, and when I asked for what she ran away. What d'ye 'spose ails her?" "Can't tell, but Zeke has also been acting up and astonishing me. This > and side he suddenly stopped and looked at me and almost shouted: 'No; I will not give her up! I will defy you to the end!' When I asked him what he meant by such durned nonsense he actually chanked his teeth." It was that romance was bubbling and by the following Tuesday Zed had made himself believe that a stern father had stepped between him and the object of his love and would brutally blast his future, and Hattie composed afternoon as we was hoeing corn side it almost broke her heart to do the thing contemplated. The farmer's bedtime was 9 o'clock. By 10 he and his good wife were snoring. Even the cat slept. Not so with Hattie and Zed, however. The young woman sat in her room, dressed for the elopement and feeling thrills of romance, and Zed had made a sneak for the barn to hitch up a horse and wagon.

At 11 o'clock the rig was driven to the front gate, and Zed jumped down and hid beside the rosebush. Three minutes later Hattie was with him. There were whispers and hand squeezes, and the elopement had started. It had progressed just forty rods when there came a flash of lightning. At fifty rods the thunder bellowed. At a hundred the rain began to fall. Zed had been crafty, but he hadn't noticed the gathering storm. Romance and a soaking shower do not go well together, but there must be no turning back. There was an old open shed in a field a mile away, and as the rain began to fall Zed put on the gad to reach its shelter. The old horse fell down three times and had to be helped up again each time before the shed was reached, but they drove under it at last. Just as they did so a flash of lightning showed an old bull at the rear end. He had also got in out of the wet, and, being the first comer, he naturally resented any intrusion. He got up and began to paw and paw and bellow, and when the brave lover got down to shoo him forth he charged the wagon and broke one wheel off and scattered the horse around. This brought about a pretty plain conversation between Hattie and Zed. "Zed Green, I'm going home," fina! declared the girl. You are the bigges duce me to marry you." And the romance seeking girl as sh stepped forth into the still pouring rain to slosh her way homeward through the puddles couldn't help bts hear the retort: "I know of another fool just as big and I'm glad I've found her out!" There was no marriage till six months later, and then Zed and Hattie clasped hands and stood up before : justice of the peace and were married for a dollar. Zed didn't even walk around the yard for a wedding tour.

An old Cingalese woman who lived in an ordinary native but by herself | 39 tf died and was buried. On the following day a large iguana (a species of lizard which attains great size) entered the compound of a gentleman living close by and attacked his poultry. Hearing the noise and commotion, he came out and on ascertaining the cause got his gun and shot the iguana. No sooner had he done this than there arose a great uproar from the relatives of the old woman, who declared that he had killed her, because her spirit had passed into the lizard, in proof of which they pointed triumphantly to the fact that it had never before been seen in the vicinity and only appeared after her death. Rupees finally appeased the outraged feelings of the old woman's descendants.

Industrial Insurance Rates Reduced

The Prudential

Future Industrial Policyholders will profit to the extent of many millions of dollars by The Prudential's latest reduction in premium rates through increased benefits.

By the Company's voluntary concession, Industrial Policyholders whose policies were issued since January 1, 1907, and were in force July 1, 1909, will have prevail in The Prudential's dealings with its Policyholders.

OVER $20,000,000 ADDED TO THEIR POLICIES Justice and liberality

What is Industrial Life Insurance? It is a system of Life Insurance introduced on this continent by The Prudential and designed principally for wage-earners. Premiums range from 3 cents per week up, and are collected weekly by Agents who call at the homes of the Policyholders. The policies are issued from ages 1 to 70, for amounts from $15 up, on the lives of both sexes.

The Prudential made the greatest gain in insurance in force in 1908 of any Life Insurance Company in the world.

The Dreamer Lives Forever.

I am tired of planning and toiling In the crowded hives of men; Heart-weary of building and spoiling, And spoiling and building again. And I long for the dear old river.

Where I dreamed my youth away: For a dreamer lives forever, But a toiler dies in a day.

I am sick of shallow seeming Of a life that is half a lie:

Of the faces lined with scheming In the throng that hurries by From the sleepless thought's endeavor I would go where the children play ;

For a dreamer lives forever, And a thinker dies in a day I feel no pride, but pity,

For the burdens the rich endure There is nothing sweet in the city But the patient lives of the poor

Oh, the little hands too skillful, And the child mind choked with weed The daughter's heart grown wilful,

And the father's heart that bleeds! Oh, no! from the street's rude bustle, From the trophies of mart and stage I would fly to the wood's low rustle. And the meadow's kindly page.

Let me dream as of old by the river, And be loved for the dream alway:

For a dreamer lives forever, And a toiler dies in a day Dean's Rheumatic Pills for Rheum and Neuralgia. Entirely vegetable, Safe. JOHN BOYLE O'REILY.

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary If the young minister had been of sanguine, easily satisfied temperament he might have accommodated himself to circumstances and drifted along as his predecessors had done. But James Morgan brought the enterprise of a modern theologian to the little hamlet, straggling down either side of a high hill, on a summit of which perched the church, like a snow temple.

to the Minister.

By ELIZABETH VAN NEST.

As the church occupied the center of the village, the young minister reasoned that it ought to be the center of interest also. But, try as he would, he could not awaken the devotional spirit. His parishioners were niggardly in tneir offerings, the attendance was small and interest slight. His sermons were lost on the slow thinking wor shipers; his musical departures were a

But the Rev. Mr. Morgan did not despair. He had the square jaw that accompanies the aggressive nature. The elasticity of his hopes was phenomenal. He simply would not be discouraged. He had accepted the call in full knowledge of the drawbacks. The score of shabby houses classed under the name of Mayhood represented only a tith of the church mem bership. It was the prosperous farmers whose indifference he must change and conquer with his eloquence.

So James Morgan brought to Mayhood a large stock of air castle material with which he beguiled his leisure. He would institute many reforms. The church should escape from an enveloping mortgage and, assuming a paying basis, make many missions glad from its plenty. It should be the mainspring. social and ecclesiastical, on which the village turned. He even proposed that the parsonage be let and the proceeds devoted to the county hos pital, a proposal that met with unanimous approval, and the minister took up his residence under Widow Fleming's roof.

Until the end of the first quarter things moved smoothly. The new minister found work to do wherever he looked. And, being generous, he forgot to be cautious when need pulled at his purse strings. Hardly realizing it, he at length found his generosity must be governed by his means until he received his first quarter's salary. the first quarter's salary was still unpaid. With a board bill two weeks in delinquency the minister, blushing and stammering, informed his parishioners of their negligence. While their profuse excuses satisfied him, he could not see his way clear to satisfy Mrs. Fleming. The fact that wheat was a failure would not recompense her for his board and lodging. Therefore the Rev. Mr. Morgan did the only thing possible from his point of view. He went to the city next day with a mysterious package. Shortly after the doctor drove three miles to borrow his microscope and was in formed that he had disposed of it. "I have so little time for experiments, you know," he explained, with money to better advantage." From this emanated a rumor that at length reached Barbara Dean's ears. The new minister was so philanthropic he had given up his pet hobby to aid

A wee and timid question mark set itself upon her heart. Perhaps she had been hasty. There was none quite like him-so big, so firm, so brave. to see a motley collection of teams and vehicles around Widow Fleming's gate. Lights shone from every window of the cottage, including his study and bedroom. The minister was tired and in no mood to participate in a surprise party on his landlady. But knowing her limited space, it would be churlish to demand privacy. He must meet her guests, who had overflowed her apartments into his, with ministerial welcome. Forcing the weariness from his face, he ran lightly up the steps and opened his study door. Ranged around the wall was a solid row of chairs, from which smiling faces glowed upon him in welcome Overrunning the center table and piled on the floor was a collection that at first seemed to be the stock of a grocery store. He singled out a sack of flour and various stone jugs with corncob stoppers as he picked his way to a small oasis of bare floor beyond. But, stumbling against one of the bulging packages, the paper burst and a stream of walnuts poured forth. "Pardon me!" he gasped, trying to repair the damage on his knees. "Very awkward of me, I'm sure." The silence was portentous, and flushed with confusion, the minister looked up straight into Barbara Dean' eyes. The light in them, tantalizing, nmused, was his undoing. The walnuts slipped from his grasp and, striking another bag, liberated a peck of popcorn. He stood up guiltily. "Please forgive me, Mrs. Fleming," he apologized. "I am sorry if my awkwardness has disclosed your gifts too "They're not Mis' Fleming's," correct-

Using a Life Preserver. "The worst trouble about a life preerver," said an old sailor, "is that few eople know what to do with one when it's thrown to them. Many a man would drown in trying to get a life preserver over his head. The average person struggling about in the water would try to lift up the big life ring and put it over his head. That only causes the man to sink deeper and take more water into his lungs. "The proper way to approach a life

FOREIGN POLICE. Dress of the Patrolmen of London, Paris and Berlin. London patrolmen carry no clubs. Attached to the middle of the belt behind is a dark lantern. The cuffs of their coats have vertical stripes, blue and white, signifying rank and distinguished service. During the frequent showers and rains they wear little waterproof capes. Their silent regulation of street traffic by hand signal is a realization of perfection. In Paris the ordinary patrolmen wear blue caps and coats and in summer white duck trousers. They carry short swords, rather as an emblem of authority, but in extreme danger use the flat side as a club. In a downpour of rain the Paris policeman hangs his cap on a hook in the back side of his belt and draws over his head the hood of a short blue cape of heavy cloth. This hooded cape is called a capuchin and in its longer form, reaching to the knees, is used by civilians as well in cold or rainy weather. single bucket of water-even a cupful—thrown on a blaze at its start often does more good than a reservoir full ten minutes later. And yet in not one out of a thousand American homes is a single bucket of water dedicated o hre protection. The only excuse for this negligence are ignorance, careessness, total disregard of property and life. Poverty may explain the absence of structural protection, but no one who has a home is too poor to afford a bucket of water. Even 25 cents spent for fire pails will measurably increase for years the safety of a house and that of its inmates. And the only attention this very effective fire apparatus will need is an occasion al refilling from the pump or tap. The virtue of the bucket of water kept exclusively for fire purposes is that it is always there when you look for it and always full of water. There is, to be sure, lots of water around the house (except when the pipe or pump has frozen), but by the time one can find a bucket, take it to the tap of pump, wait for it to fill and then take Commercial and Columbian it back to the fire not one bucket but ten are needed. If, however, you can dash into the hall, seize a ready filled bucket and souse the blazing curtain, all within twenty seconds, one bucket generally will be more than enough, as good as a whole fire department and far less destructive than its super-

The family that cares anything at all for its belongings should keep at least one bucket of water on a little bracket in the hall on each floor and another bucket in the garret. Down cellar there should be a barrel of water and a bucket not far from the furnace. The water in the garret or cellar may be kept from freezing in cold weather by adding common salt. -Exchange.

THE WITCHES' TREE. Superstitions Regarding the Influence of the Elder. Country people speak of the elder tree as " witches' tree" and planted It near farm buildings and dairies to keep off witches. They also say that the roots should never come near a well, still less grow into it, or the water will be spoiled. Evelyn's opinion was also unfavorable. The diarist says: "I do by no means commend the

"We learn from Biesius that a certain house in Spain, seated among many elder trees, diseased and killed nearly all its inhabitants, which, when at last they were grubbed up, became very healthy and wholesome place." Cattle scarcely touch the elder, and the mole is driven away by the scent Carters often placed branches on their horses' heads to keep off flies. Nothing will grow well in the company of the elder, and when it has been removed and all its roots carefully grubbed up it is some few years before the ground becomes perfectly sweet and good for anything. The berries, besides feeding the birds, make excellent country wine delicious with soda water in summer or taken hot in winter. The wood is particularly good for skewers, and a curious red fungus grows on elder stumps. A species of elder in the Tyrol is covered with beautiful scarlet berries - Selhorne's Magazine

A MAJOR AND

The Gruff Old Soldier Conquered In Spite of Himself.

By SUSAN H. ENDICOTT. [Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary

Major James Godfrey, U. S. A., retired and living in his own villa with wife and daughter, had several fads and fancies to keep the family and the neighbors busy, but one particular fad was destined to get him into trouble sooner or later.

He could read in his morning paper with the greatest equanimity of murders, robberies, assaults, thefts and burnings at the stake, but when he came across an item about a masher he fired up at once and shouted out that he would give $500 out of his own milding; Tuesday at Jefferson; Wednesday at pocket to see the scoundrel lynched or sent to prison for life.

His daughter used to look at him in wonder when he broke out in this fashion, while the wife was discreetly silent. Perhaps the latter had flirted a bit before giving her heart to the major and he was remembering it in his old age.

For three months Miss Kate had wanted to attend an art school in the city and receive instructions. During those three months there happened to be an unusual number of "mashes" recorded in the papers, and the father would not hear of her even running up to town to do a little shopping unless he or the mother went along. He was as firm as the rock of Gibraltar. After a time, however, the record be gan to peter out, and as he was pleas ed with what his daughter had already done with the brush and had hopes of her future the major finally gave his consent. It was only eight miles to the city, and then a street car would take her right to the doors of the school. All she had to do, going and

Unknown to her, he took the same train to the city with her for a week, and then, as nothing happened and his rheumatism get worse, he left her to make her way alone.

Two weeks had passed when Miss Kate came home one afternoon in a flutter. Her mother happened to be out, and she must tell some one. She therefore related to the father that while on the street car en route to the depot and home some thief had snipped the chain of her purse and borne the prize away. The prize held her return ticket and a dime.

At the depot she found her tears falling, but a good Samaritan had come forward and handed her change enough for the fare. She couldn't exactly say whether he was a grandfather or a young man, homely or good with me-come along, sir-and meet looking. He had spoken only a few words and lifted his hat and retired. It might have been a white hat or a black one-she could not tell. Obeying her father, she had kept her eyes on the floor, and they were filled with tears besides.

The major heard the story to the end, and then be roared. The man who had taken pity on her financial condition at the depot was a masher, of course. He had followed her home on the train. He would meet her again and make the matter an excuse for addressing her. He was no grandfather, but a young man and no doubt a professional masher. Miss Kate should have repulsed bim with scorn. She should have had him arrested. She should have hired a truck to bring her home or walked if all the trucks were busy. For a quarter of an hour he scolded and growled and then wound up by saying that the art school business was at an end. She could attend no more. He would sit on the front veranda with a shotgun across his knees, and if that plotting masher even passed the house he should carry away buckshot. Tears were shed and loving appeals made, but the rock of Gibraltar was right there. Two weeks passed, and the masher did not appear. At least the major did not fire upon any of the young men driving or walking on the highway. The daughter felt that the stranger had been actuated by the kindest metives. He had spoken just enoughnot a word more. He had not offered his card. The fare was only 25 cents, of May, and first Monday of October. For Court but she felt ashamed that she could not return it Had opportunity offered for a second meeting she would have insisted on doing so.

Two weeks passed away, and then the mother went to the city to do a little shopping. She also came home with a tale to tell. She thought she was telling it to her daughter alone, fourth Wednesday of every month, except but it so happened that the major was just outside the window and heard every word She had finished her of April; fourth Tuesday of June; fourth Tuesday of September; last Wednesday of December. shopping and reached the depot when By adjournment: On Tuesdays, except during she realized that she had spent all her money. A good Samaritan came forward. He smiled, raised his hat, and-that was all. But Mrs. Major Godfrey's eyes had not been filled with tears and cast down. She had seen that he was a gentlemanly looking young man of twenty-five and that he took the same train as she did and evidently lived farther down the line. Then Miss Kate thought she remembered that in the one instant she had raised her eyes-quite involuntarily, you knowshe had made out the same sort of

The major heard that much and wondered and slept. He awoke again at midnight and sat up in bed to see a young man beside him. He got a dose of medicine, and then he suddenly exclaimed:

"Here-what's all this? Where am

"Don't excite yourself, major," soothed the other. "You are at the Revere hotel and very much better than you were three hours ago. Sleep and quietness are what you need now. In the morning you shall learn all." "But my bonds-my bonds!" shouted the patient.

"I beg pardon, major, but as you were on your way to the depot yesterday afternoon you met an old soldier and drank with him. He was a confidence man. I entered the place just as the knockout drops had put you into his hands. You lost nothing, and I brought you here and called a doctor. You are pretty near all right now, but I shall see you home after we have had something to eat. Don't object, please. You are weak and diz-

The idea that he had been a ninny grueled the major, but he was too weak to shout. He wanted to think, but his brain was too sluggish. He was, therefore, like a baby in the coming, as the father told her over and hands of the other for awhile. Strong coffee and a bite to eat and the ride over, was to keep her eyes cast down and her purse clutched tightly in her to the depot braced him up, and as the train started he suddenly exclaim-

A camel is never relieved of its load from the beginning of the journey to its end. It eats, walks and sleeps under its burden, often for weeks at a time. will not be able to withstand the keen competition of the new railways which are piercing every part of Asia Minor, yet, thanks to the power of tradition over the Turkish inhabitants of the country and their fondness for these animals, the caravan routes today are still able to hold their own side by side with the Anatolia, Cassaba and Aden railways. Hundreds of camels pass over the caravan bridge into the city of Smyrna every day, and in the market place in front of the mosque of Mohammed at Constantinople many camels may still be seen.—Philadelphia

Ledger. Not Since the Flood. Sir Henry Irving once received what he at the time considered a very palpable snub, delivered him by a highlander. While touring in Scotland the actor visited some of the notable traditionary scenes associated with Shakespearean drama. As a matter of course one of the first pilgrimages was to the blasted heath where Macbeth met the witches. In an agreeable mood Sir Henry as they drove along turned smilingly to his driver. "Are there any witches about now?" he asked. The driver whipped up his horses. "Not since the flood," he replied in his curt Scots way.

SHOOTING WHALES.

Modern Whalers Use a Cannon and an Explosive Harpoon. Whaling with modern methods in Alaskan waters is an exciting game, especially for those who are new to the business. The modern whaling steamer is a little vessel almost round on the bottom, which enables it to be turned and managed with the greatest ease. Mounted at the bow is a small cannon that shoots a harpoon weighing more than 100 pounds and having an explosive head, called the bomb. If the shot is good and the harpoon is planted squarely behind the fin, the bomb crashes into the lungs, killing instantly; if not, the struggle may last for several hours. After a whale has been killed the carcass is brought alongside the boat and inflated so that it will float. A long coll of rubber hose, one end of which is attached to a pump and the other to a hollow spear pointed tube of steel, with perforations along its entire length, is used for this purpose. The spear is thrust well down into the whale's side, the air pump started When inflated enough to keep it afloat the tube is withdrawn, the incision plugged with oakum and the carcass cast off. A buoy with a flag is attached to the body, and it is then set adrift to be picked up at the end of The whaling station is a group of 9 to 12 A. M.; 2 to 4 P. M. The saying that every part of the pig but the squeal is now of market value is also a fact with the whale. Not a particle of the animal is wasted. After the skeleton is stripped of flesh it is disarticulated and the bones chopped in pieces. The blubber is tried out for oil, and the meat and bones are boiled for the same purpose. Later the flesh is arti ficially dried and sifted, making a fine guano, and the bones are ground up for fertilizer. Even the blood is boiled and dried with the flesh, and the water in which the blubber has been tried out makes excellent glue. The fins and tail, after being sliced into thin strips, are salted and barreled and shipped to Japan as an article of food. 37 Washington Sq., Weymouth. -World's Work. A Train Load of Monkeys. A plague of monkeys some years ago sorely troubled the officials at a small station on the Saran railway, in northwest India, says the Bombay Gazette. Trucks full of grain for export were often stored up in the station, and the monkeys came down in large numbers from a neighboring grove to help themselves to the grain, picking holes in the tarpaulin roof of the wagons. The officials were wearied out with keeping watch and scaring away the thieves, who daily grew bolder, till an ingenious guard hit upon a stratagem. For several days sweets and fruits were put on the roofs of the wagons, with the result that the whole of the montey colony were attracted to the spot and soon became perfectly indifferent to man. One morning when they were all busily feeding an engine was stealthily attached to the wagons, and suddenly the train moved off. The monkeys were quite scared and made no attempt to escape, sitting crouched together till the train had gone several miles and stopped at the jungle. Then they wanted no hint to leave. Every monkey leaped down howling and fled into the jungle, whence none ever returned to trouble the railway.

With a drastic law on the statute books and with practically the whole forested area of the State under the direct super vision of State forest wardens, it would seem at first as if Massachusetts should be largely free from the heavy annual loss ued. Above all others, Mr. Hunt was the inventor of the Hunt life-saving gun and apparatus His reminiscences of Weymouth and other writings are too well and favorably known to need any other encomium. He has passed on full of honor, and his familiar form and genial welcome to all will be very sadly missed. He was liberal and generous to a marked degree; he would often ask his gardener if he knew any of his neighbors that were gardenless, and if so, take them a basket of selected vegetables. He made many donations o various kinds and he did not wish to have them heralded all over town. Mr. Hunt was a great lover of big dogs. Orcutt Family Association Re-Union.

The sixth re-union of the Orcutt Family Association was held in Masonic Building at Melrose, Saturday, August 21, 1909 President, Mr. F. E. Orcutt of Melrose gave an address of welcome to a very enthusiastic audience. Reports of Secretary and Treasurer were read showing a live and prosperous condition of the Assoiation. Many letters were read, one rom Mr. F. M. Erickson, of Ripon, Wis. another from Mrs. W. D. Hall, of Minne apolis, Minn., and another from Alfred

W. Orcutt, of Northfield, Minn, all of much interest, some others containing regrets at not being able to attend, others giving much information important in making records. Many genealogical blanks were received well filled out, in some cases giving connecting links with other records on file. At one o'clock the meeting adjourned to the banquet hall, and members present will long remember the very bountiful and delicious dinner served by order of the President, which, together with his very pleasing address and interest in each one present, convinced all that no mistake was made in electing him as head of the association. After a very social hour, business was resumed and officers elected for the ensuing year as follows: Pres., Mr. F. E. Orcutt, of Melrose: Vice Presidents, Jason rcutt of South Weymouth, David Orcut and Wm. A. Orcutt, of Melrose; Sec'y

Mrs. Annie E. Jordan, of Weymouth; Asst. Sec'y, Miss Helen Mae West, 17 Ashmont St., Dorchester; Treas., Mrs. Abbie M. West, 17 Ashmont St., Dorchester; Historian, Mrs. Charlotte E. Rowe, of Waltham; Council, full board of officers and Mrs. Olive Morris, of North Abington, Frank A. Bates, of South Braintree, Miss Lizzie Thayer, of Holbrook, and Miss Alice B. Orcutt, of South Boston. Report was made of the decease of six nembers: Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Orcutt, and Mrs. Galen P. Cushing, of North

Abington, Mrs. David Orcutt of Melrose

Mrs. Cephas Haskins of Lakeville, and Martin Erskine of Rockland. A committee was appointed by the president to revise the By-Laws. It was voted to hold the next re-union the last Wednesday in June, 1910, at South Weymouth, Mass.

The meeting adjourned at four o'clock, and the President escorted his guests to the ball game and thence by trolley to see the City, finally ariving at his home where the party was again entertained. A letter addressed to the Secretary was delivered by the post at this time, coming from W. Edwin Orcutt of Sioux City, Iowa, as a greeting to the Association, and it was hoped that it would reach Melrose in time to be read at the meeting. There was also enclosed in this letter a genealogical blank giving much information of ancestors back to William Orcutt of Scituate-Bridgewater.

The Burdett method of touch type writing, enabling the operator to use a typewriter without looking at the keyboard, has made the Burdett graduates very valuable office assistants.

The high rents in the heart of the city make it prohibitive for an institution to secure additional rooms until actually pressed by increased business to do so. No more pertinent comment can be made upon the remarkable success of Burdett than to state that during the past year i became necessary, in order to avoid a waiting list, to add six schoolrooms to its plant. The enrollment to date is so much greater than that of a year ago to day that during the past week, four more rooms have been leased, a total of 10 since September 1908, in order for the school to keep abreast of its enlarging business. Burdett seems to have struck the keynote in educating students so that they are eagerly sought by the business world.-From Boston Herald.

AUNT JUDITH'S

The Part They Played In the Life of Peggy and Dick.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

The Merritts' wedding presents had been very plain and practical. They had few rich friends, and their relatives had confined themselves to furniture and useful articles for the small at. Peggy's girl companions had given her centerpieces and lingerie, and Dick's office colleagues had clubbed together and had presented a cut glass punch bowl.

But Aunt Judith gave silver spoons, heavy, solid and richly chased. "I think it was lovely of her," said the little wife as she set her own table for the first time. "A little good silver is such a help. Some day we will buy forks and knives to match, won't we, Dicky, boy?" "Sure," said Dick easily. "They've got to appreciate me at the office soon.

I won't let them grind me down this way always." But a raise in salary was slow in coming. Dick's worth was evidently not as apparent to his employers as to himself, and gradually the furniture and carpets began to grow shabby, and the silver spoons were still the only sign of elegance in the Merritts' home. Peggy polished them every day. "You see," she told Aunt Judith, who came from her little home town to visit them, "we don't seem really poor when we can sip our tea from shining "It is you who brighten things up," said Aunt Judith, "you with your cheerful face.' "Oh"-suddenly Peggy's voice broke and her eyes filled-"oh, Aunt Judith, you don't know how hard it is to smile sometimes.' "Why, child"-there was consternation in the old lady's tone-"aren't you happy?" "It's on account of Dick. Things aren't going right with him at the office. They don't seem to get on with him or he doesn't with them, and he gets blue, and it isn't easy for me to cheer him up."

"I see," said shrewd Aunt Judith, and that night she asked the young husband, "How are things at the of-"They promised to give me a raise a year ago, but they haven't

"Why not?" asked Aunt Judith. "They don't appreciate me," Dick flung out.

"Perhaps," Aunt Judith began and then stopped. "I am not going to help him out," was her mental comment "He has his own lesson to learn." But Aunt Judith did not realize that while Dick was learning his lesson Peggy must suffer. "He thinks too much of himself," was her further thought as the days went on. "I'll let him work hard until

"I'm no good, Peggy A man who can't keep his job and support his wife might as well be dead." Then as he saw the sick horror in her face he gathered her into his arms. "I didn't mean just that," he murmured, "but I don't know what has got into me. I can't see things right any more."

After that Dick's days were spent in search of work and Peggy's in sewing on little white garments which she made from her own wedding lingerie She had not written to Aunt Judith of the bad state of affairs, and there was no one else, for Peggy was an orphan and so was Dick.

The meals became so scant in substance that at last Dick said: "It's hardly worth while to serve boiled potatoes with silver spoons, is it, Peggy's You'd better let me pawn them and pay the rent.

"Oh, no!" Peggy's hand was over her heart. "Oh, no!" "Well, the first thing you know we'l

Ants Are Six Eared. In the matter of some of their sense organs the ants are more than ordinarily endowed. Strange as it may seem, each ant has at least six ears. Aside from this multiplicity of ears, they are located in just about the queerest place imaginable-on the legs. They seem deaf to all sounds made by the vibration of the air, but detect the slightest possible vibrations of solid material. This is supposed to be to their advantage in that such things as approaching footsteps tell more of the possibility of danger than such sounds as are transmitted through the air. So sensitive are their feet that they detect the impact of a small bird shot dropped on the table from a height of about six inches and about fourteen feet distant from an artificial nest placed at the other end of the table.-St. Nicholas.

Nothing Common. William had become engaged to a "very respectable" girl of "very respectable family" indeed, and he carefully kept from her the fact that one of his brothers had once been a boarder at his majesty's expense in the county jail. THE PREDICAMENT OF ANGLIN, SENIOR.

His Own Love Affair and That of His College Chum.

By HENRIETTA G. ROBINSON. Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary

Press.] Halfway down the steps of the fraternity house Anglin turned and went thoughtfully back to the room that he thared with Beresford.

"You're dead sure you'll not change your mind and come?" queried Anglin. Beresford, with a volume open on his knee and a pipe gripped between his teeth, nodded emphatically. "Then I suppose you don't mind if I take your skates? They're sharper than mine."

But when Fred Anglin had slung the puilding; Tuesday at Jefferson; Wednesday at skates over his shoulder and buttoned on his thick gloves he still lingered. It seemed as though this were not what he had come back to say after

"Take them, of course."

"I ought to tell you, Tom-we've been such pals right along-that I'm going to put my fate to the test tonight. The Tremaine girls will be at the skating party. And tonight I intend to speak to Gerla."

Beresford jumped up and wrung his friend's hand enthusiastically. "Good for you!" he cried. "Go in and win! As long as it isn't Geraldine I can endure the thought of your happiness if she says yes. I'll be able to listen to your raptures without experiencing a perfectly legitimate desire to sling you through the window." "Thanks, old man," laughed Anglin, adding: "Lucky we've not set out respective hearts on the same sister. Now, I'm blessed if I understand your hold back? You are older than I, Beresford shook his head with a grim smile "It isn't that. You've a wealthy father and a settled income. I've only enough to pull me through this final year. When I get my diploma-well, I shan't have much more, in a material line. I don't dare ask Geraldine to wait until I have attained-achieved arrived. It wouldn't be fair to her." "It would-her promise-be a tremendous incentive to you!"

as you are her captive, why do you

"Oh, I know that. But she must be considered first.' There was another handclasp, a firm and silent one. Anglin swung away for the tramp into the country, where the skaters were to assemble at Pilgrim's pond The star studded night closed down early. When Anglin reached the appointed place the amusement of the evening was already in full swing. The expanse of ice was clean swept and of an opaque, turquoise tint. Strings of Chinese lanterns dangled in B. Worster, John B. Whelan, R. W. Loud; the multi-hued propinquity from bare tree to tree and from pole to pole. In a declivity, semi-shaded by a fly tent, a royal fire blazed and crackled. In and out, around and about, in dullness under the sullen stars or in red relief where the flambeaux, set at regular intervals, flared fantastically, sped and flashed the dark figures of the skaters. Fred Anglin got on his skates as quickly as possible and started out across the frozen pond. Many turned to look after the athletic young figure circling through their midst with such easy, swallowlike grace of motion.

But he noticed neither their presence nor their admiration. He was looking for one particular little figure. She would wear a short skating costume of blue velvet, the Russian blouse, which was girt with heavy cords that swung backward when she raced. The high peaked cap would make a penthouse over a mass of fair curls and mis chievous eyes, bluer than any violets

"There she is!" he said suddenly to

Alone in the shadow of the wigwam shaped refreshment tent, apparently fancying herself unobserved, a slender young form was whirling on heel and toe, cutting a pattern of intricate tracery on the ice.

"Come with me," he cried as he dashed to her side. He held out his hands, crossed at the wrists in the old approved carry-the-lady-out-of-town

Together they swung gracefully down the strip of gleaming ice which was least covered.

But when they were quite away from the merry crowd of skaters, whose voices came to them musically through the frosty night air, Anglin turned their impetuous progress to one very deliberate. And then, as he took a firmer hold of her mittened hands, he began, after the manner of many another lover who has been compelled to force his courage to the sticking

"Dear," he said desperately, can't keep silent any longer. You know how I've cared for you ever lege. Although I've never been obliged to consider ways and means, still a legacy has made it possible for me to ask you to give me your promise. I know," he added hastily, "you won't care about this sort of thing, but I

They were at the tent. Yellow streaks of light from its canvas apertures were glinting out at them. The For SOUTH WEYMOUTH—week days—5.30, 6.00, 6.30, 7.00, 7.30, 8.00, 8.30, 9.00 A. M., girl came to a standstill, her hand still on her companion's arm. "What was that you said?" she ask merriment that made Anglin think suddenly of his roommate. "Oh, that's what-what fooled you, was it? Why, we changed them just for fun. But is Tom"-she flushed furiously at her slip of names-"I mean if Gerla had thought"-

"What!" exclaimed Anglin ambiguously. "Geraldine, do you think"-"Oh, as to Gerla," she broke in, "she is coming back of you. Ask her yourself." And she skated swiftly away. The next instant Anglin was facing girl in a suit of wine colored velvet. The peaked cap was drawn high over tousled golden curls and eyes of deep-

"Are you quite sure you're not mistaken now?" she asked quizzically. "Quite!" he assured her. "But I would like positive proof-and corroboration!"

And both Fred Anglin succeeded in securing before he strode home to ask Tom for congratulations and to hearten him with the fondest of hopes.

A Transformation Scene. That great statesman William Pitt, upon whose word so many tremendous issues hung, was in the habit of retiring to his country house for seasons of relaxation. There he dropped his character of august prime minister and became for the time a romping schoolboy. One day he had been skylarking with his young friends. He rushed into every fray with the ardor of the youngest present. When the fun was most furious a servant entered the room and informed the prime minister, who was coatless and embellished with burnt cork, that Lords Hawkesbury and Castlereagh had arrived from London on important business. "Ask them to wait," remarked Pitt and proceeded with the game. When that was finished Pitt said that he must attend to two noble lords and retired to his dressing room to repair damages. Presently he returned, and a remarkable transformation took place. Standing in the middle of the room, the prime minister drew himself up to full height of unapproachable dignity. To the astonishment of the young people present the two lords came into the room almost on their hands and knees and with abject obsequiousness explained the object of their visit. Mr. Pitt listened with an air of distan hauteur and with a sentence or two dismissed his noble guests.-Westminster Review.

POSED THE DEAD MAN.

Scheme of the Gamblers In Crock ford's House In London. Crockford, the proprietor of a well known London gambling house, was made to play a queer role after he was dead. When one of Crockford's horses was poisoned just before the Derby the misfortune brought on an attack of apoplexy, which proved fatal within forty-eight hours. Now, many of Crockford's friends had staked large sums on another of the gambler's horses, which was a favorite for the Oaks and which was disqualified by the death of the owner. Only the peo ple in the gambling house knew of Crockford's death, and it was resolved to keep it a secret until after the race. The servants were bribed and sworn to secrecy, and the conspirators on the day after the night upon which Crockford died had the body placed in a chair at a window, so that people returning from the track could see the gambler sitting there. He was fixed up to look as lifelike as possible and through the window and partially concealed from view by the curtains looked so natural that no one of the great | Telephone 152-3 crowd which came cheering by the house when on their return from seeing Crockford's horse win the Oaks suspected the trick. The next day it was announced that Crockford was dead, but it was years before the true story leaked out. Westminster Gazette.

An Awkward Text. A butcher of a certain village, being a devout Christian, whenever he sent a business note invariably accompanied it with a text. A certain lady, wishing him to kill some of her pigs, sent him a letter to notify him of the fact, to which he sent the following reply: "Dear Madam-I will call on Friday to kill your hogs without fail. Yours, Mr. B. N. B.-'Be ye also ready.' "-London Graphic.

Farmer Jepson, widower, lived four niles from Akron on the country road, and Jane Schofield, widow and farmer, lived three miles west of him on the Red Bridge road. They had lived thus for five years and only knew each other by name. The five years might have become twenty had not an old lop horned cow stepped in to give the parties an introduction.

The cow was owned by the widow. Besides being lop horned she was bobtailed, wild eyed and had various bad habits, one of which was jumping six rail fences and wandering about nights. These promenades sometimes led her miles away and into strange pastures. The first time Farmer Jepson saw her she was in the midst of his cornfield and had cleared about half an acre of the juicy stalks. He was a good man, but he swore at her and called her names. He also tried Surplus, $30,000 his best to kill her on the spot. A week later the cow called again to see how the corn was coming on, and after half killing her the farmer sent word that if she was not kept at home he would sue her owner for damages. "And who is Farmer Jepson that ROWARD R. HASTINGS. talks so big. I'd like to know!" exclaimed the widow as she got the message by a hired man. "If he thinks he's the biggest toad in the puddle let him go right ahead and sue. Two can play at that game. I'm not allowing phia Bulletin. my live stock to bother my neighbors, Now is the time but I'm not going to sit up every night in the week to see that that old again there'll be a lawsuit to make things rumble." The cow didn't hurry matters any. She waited until Mr. Jepson had transplanted his cabbage plants and they had got fairly growing, and then she called one night and helped herself to 250 of them, and two days later the widow learned that suit had been com- and remove his entire bank account.'menced by Farmer Jepson to recover | Washington Star $250 damages.

Wish I'd seen her before I begun this suit." "Lands o' massy, but he hain't no mean looking man!" exclaimed the widow after a look at the farmer. the old cow. If he had I'd have chained her up. Wonder how hard he'll swear agin me!" She was soon to know. The plaintiff's lawyer in opening the case said it was an aggravated case of trespass and damage and that the sum mentioned wasn't really half what they should have sued for. Then he went on to tell of what a defiant woman the defendant was and wound up by stating his hopes that the jury would render a verdict without leaving the box. Then the plaintiff was called to the witness chair, and, to the surprise of yer, he said he had forgotten the message the woman returned to him. He followed that up by declaring that his feelings had simply been shocked and dow. that he had fully recovered from the shock in a minute and a half. As to the corn and cabbage, perhaps $10 would pay the bill. "You jackass, but you have lost your ase!" hissed his lawyer as the witness stepped down with a smile in the direction of the widow, whose lawyer was whispering to her: "Now, you get up there and give us ome hot talk and your case is won." There was no hot talk from the widw. On the contrary, she cooed like a dove. She admitted to the ownership of the jumping, predatory cow, but was quite willing to pay reasonable damages. She didn't doubt the plaintiff's shocked feelings and was sorry for them and wished he had hit the old cow with the ax. One of the results of the suit was a verdict for 6 cents' damages, and another was that Farmer Jepson said he would call at her home for the money. He kept his word A week later he drove up to

"It is simply appalling, the rush, the roar, the chatter and the bustle, like Bedlam broke loose," the traveler said. "The principal object of conversation is said to be money, and the hubbub, bawling and uproar in all sorts of tones from shrill and screaming to gruff and growling, accompanied by all sorts of gesticulations, with tongue, head and feet, are beyond description. "It is rather odd, but laughter is almost never heard in this uproar, and as for whistling it is a lost art. If there are any quarrels they are not to be heard in public, although when a company of natives gets to carry on an animated conversation it appears to the observer as if the next act would be a melee.

"In addition to these natural sounds there are others of an artificial character that are equally familiar to the traveler. Such is the noise of the drums called tomtoms, which are beaten on every occasion, and a kind of pipe about eighteen inches long, with holes like those of a flute and breathed through in a way that produces a variety of notes of a wild, discordant character. A frightful noise is made by the kaffa men blowing on a big shell "- Washington Post
